The Harvard Leadership Development Program

Upcoming Leadership Offerings

Change Leadership

In this two-part series leaders will explore different types of organizational change and skills for effectively leading change. Whether you want to learn steps for implementing a change effort or strategies for navigating personal reactions to change, this series will be useful. Leaders will have a chance to talk about their personal change challenges and get strategies relevant for them.

Strategic Planning

In this two-part series, leaders will explore the important role strategic planning plays in both envisioning the future and clarifying current priorities. Whether you want to embark on a comprehensive strategic planning process or utilize a few select tools this session will be useful. Leaders are encouraged to attend with a peer from their organization so that key concepts can be taken back and applied with shared ownership.

Who We Are

We help managers and leaders enhance their skills and reach their professional goals through training, development, and coaching.

Typically in the fall we would announce the Harvard Leadership Development Program (HLDP) offerings. This year we are introducing unique programs relevant to the times. These sessions will be practical, experiential, and open to all leaders and managers.
